

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

SHERRILL FOSTER, HOWARD FOSTER,
SHEILA BURTON, and MINNIE BURTON

No. C 07-05445 WHA

Plaintiffs,

v.

SHANNON EDMONDS, LORI TYLER, COUNTY OF LAKE, CITY OF CLEARLAKE, and DOES 1-100,

Defendants.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS AND VACATING HEARING

INTRODUCTION

In this civil-rights action, defendants County of Lake and City of Clearlake separately move to dismiss all plaintiffs' claim. Because plaintiffs have stated no cognizable federal claim, defendants' motions are GRANTED. The hearing on these motions are hereby VACATED.

STATEMENT

On December 7, 2005, Rashad Williams ("Williams") and Christian Foster ("Foster") visited the home of defendant Shannon Edmonds (FAC ¶ 13). After an altercation between the parties, Williams and Foster fled the house and started running across the street (id. at ¶ 14). Edmonds, according to the complaint, then began firing a gun at Williams and Foster hitting and killing them both (ibid.).

1 Plaintiffs allege Edmonds was a known drug dealer and regularly solicited teenagers in 2 the area to sell drugs on his behalf (id. at ¶ 14). The complaint further alleges that the County 3 of Lake, City of Clearlake, and the Doe defendants conspired with Edmonds (a Caucasian) and 4 were partly responsible for the deaths of Williams and Foster (both African American) by 5 wrongfully allowing Edmonds to continue his unlawful drug ring (id. at ¶ 7). In particular, 6 plaintiffs allege defendants: (1) “allow[ed] Edmonds and Tyler unlawfully to sell recreational 7 drugs, to possess firearms, [and] to use minors in the unlawful sale of recreational drugs; (2) 8 “failed to force [Edmonds and Tyler] to stop illegal activities;” (3) “protect[ed] Edmonds, a 9 known drug dealer, and allow[ed] the racist Edmonds to continue his illegal activity;” and (4) 10 “fail[ed] to investigate properly and evaluate deaths involving black men shot by a white 11 person” (id. at ¶¶ 1, 15, 20, 32). Edmonds and Tyler were never prosecuted for the deaths of 12 Williams and Foster. Notably, plaintiffs do not allege that Edmonds or Tyler were employed by 13 the County or City.

14 Plaintiffs filed this action on October 24, 2007, alleging deprivation of civil rights under 15 42 U.S.C. 1983 and violations of various state-law claims against the city and county. Plaintiffs 16 Sherrill Foster and Howard Foster bring their claims as the mother and father, respectively, and 17 successors in interest for their son, decedent Foster and the Estate of Christian Dante Foster (id.
18 at ¶ 3). Plaintiffs Sheila Burton and Minnie Burton bring their claims as the mother and 19 grandmother, respectively, and successors in interest for decedent Williams (ibid.). The City 20 and County now move to dismiss all claims against them for failure to state any cognizable 21 claim.

23 1. LEGAL STANDARD.

24 A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) tests the legal sufficiency of the claims alleged 25 in the complaint. The Supreme Court has recently explained that “[w]hile a complaint attacked 26 by a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss does not need detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff’s 27 obligation to provide the ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitlement to relief’ requires more than labels and 28 conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Bell

1 Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 127 S. Ct. 1555, 1564-65 (May 21, 2007) (citations and alterations
2 omitted). “[C]onclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are insufficient to defeat 3 a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim.” Epstein v. Wash. Energy Co., 83 F.3d 1136, 4 1140 (9th Cir. 1996). In complaints that do not allege fraud, plaintiffs need only make “a short 5 and plain statement of the claim,” thus giving the defendant fair notice of the claim and of the 6 grounds upon which it rests. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P.
7 8(a)(2)).

8 2. STATE-LAW CLAIMS.

9 In their opposition, plaintiffs concede that all of their state-law claims were not brought 10 in compliance with the California Claims Act and should therefore be dismissed as to the 11 County and City.

12 3. SECTION 1983 CLAIM.

13 “The terms of Section 1983 make plain two elements that are necessary for recovery.
14 First, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant has deprived him of a right secured by the 15 ‘Constitution and laws’ of the United States. Second, the plaintiff must show that the defendant 16 deprived him of this constitutional right ‘under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, 17 custom, or usage, of any State or Territory.’ This second element requires that the plaintiff 18 show that the defendant acted ‘under color of law.’” Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S.
19 144, 150 (1970). A private individual or entity may be considered a state actor where the “state 20 has exercised such coercive power or has provided such significant encouragement, either overt 21 or covert, that the choice must be that of the State.” American Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. V. Sullivan, 22 526 U.S. 40, 52 (1999).

23 Municipalities and local governments can be sued directly for violations of 24 constitutional rights under Section 1983 where government officials were acting pursuant to an 25 official policy or recognized custom. Monell v. Dept. of Social Serv. of New York, 436 U.S.
26 658, 690 (1978). The plaintiff must identify the policy or custom which caused the violation.
27 “The plaintiff must also demonstrate that, through its deliberate conduct, the municipality was 28 the ‘moving force’ behind the conduct alleged. That is, a plaintiff must show that the municipal

1 action was taken with the requisite degree of culpability and must demonstrate a direct causal 2 link between the municipal action and the deprivation of federal rights.” Bd. of County 3 Comm’rs of Bryan County v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 404 (1997) (emphasis in original).

4 Plaintiffs essentially base their Section 1983 claim on the allegation that the City and 5 County knew about Edmond’s illegal conduct and chose do nothing about it. This inaction, 6 plaintiffs allege, somehow enabled Edmonds to shoot Foster and Williams. Plaintiffs’ oblique 7 theory, however, is not pled sufficiently to sustain any Section 1983 claim. Plaintiffs primarily 8 rely on Fries v. Barnes, 618 F.2d 988 (2nd Cir. 1980), where the plaintiff alleged that a private 9 physician turned over surgically removed shotgun fragments from plaintiff’s thigh and other 10 personal effects of plaintiff’s to the police at the behest of a police officer. In holding that the 11 plaintiff had sufficiently pled a Section 1983 claim, the court, quoting United States v. Mekjian, 12 505 F.2d 1320, 1327 (5th Cir. 1975), stated:

13 Accordingly, where federal officials actively participate in 14 a search being conducted by private parties or else stand by 15 watching with approval as the search continues, federal authorities are clearly implicated in the search and it must comport with fourth amendment requirements.

16 The Ninth Circuit has applied this same principle. See Howerton v. Gabica, 708 F.2d 380 (9th 17 Cir. 1983).

18 Here, unlike Fries, plaintiffs have not alleged that city or county officials directed 19 Edmonds to confront Williams and Foster or that they stood back and watched the incident with 20 approval. In fact, plaintiffs have not even alleged that the county or city knew that Williams 21 and Foster were going to visit Edmonds at his home. In Martinez v. State of California, 444 22 U.S. 277 (1980), the complaint alleged that the state negligently released a convicted rapist after 23 serving five years even though he was sentenced to a term of one to twenty years, with a 24 recommendation that he not be paroled. Five months after his release the parolee tortured and 25 killed the plaintiffs’ decedent. Plaintiffs brought a Section 1983 claim alleging that by 26 negligently releasing the parolee, the state had deprived the plaintiffs’ decedent of her life 27 without due process of law. The Supreme Court in Martinez, 444 U.S. at 285, found that the 28 plaintiffs had failed to state a Section 1983 claim, holding:

1 Although the decision to release Thomas from prison was 2 action by the State, the action of [parolee] five months later 3 cannot be fairly characterized as state action. Regardless of 4 whether, as a matter of state tort law, the parole board 5 could be said either to have had a 'duty' to avoid harm to 6 his victim or to have proximately caused her death, we hold 7 that, taking these particular allegations as true, appellees 8 did not 'deprive; appellants' decedent of life within the 9 meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment. Her life was taken 10 by the parolee five months after his release. He was in no 11 sense an agent of the parole board. Further, the parole board was not aware that appellants' decedent, as distinguished from the public at large, faced any special danger. . . . [W]e do hold that at least under the particular circumstances of this parole decision, appellants decedent's death is too remote a consequence of the parole officers' action to hold them responsible under the federal civil rights law. Although a § 1983 claim has been described as 'a species of tort liability,' it is perfectly clear that not every injury in which a state official has played some part is actionable under that statute.

12 Similarly, the current allegations in the complaint are far too remote to attribute the deaths of 13 Williams and Foster to the actions of the city and county. There is no allegation that Edmonds 14 was in any way acting as an agent of the city or county or that the city or county implemented 15 any policy that contributed even in part to the shootings. Plaintiffs' conclusory allegations are 16 not enough.

17 Although not alleged in the complaint, in their opposition brief plaintiffs rely on a new 18 theory to support their Section 1983 claim: that the county and city's actions deprived plaintiffs 19 of their right to meaningful access the court system. To properly plead a claim for denial of 20 meaningful access to the court system a plaintiff must show the existence of an underlying 21 claim, whether anticipated or lost. The access claim "is ancillary to the underlying claim, 22 without which a plaintiff cannot have suffered injury by being shut out of court." Christopher 23 v. Harbury, 536 U.S. 403, 415 (2002). "[T]he underlying cause of action, whether anticipated 24 or lost, is an element that must be described in the complaint, just as much as allegations must 25 describe the officials acts frustrating the litigation." Id.

26 In Delew v. Wagner, 143 F.3d 1219, 1222–23 (9th Cir. 1998), the Ninth Circuit reversed 27 the district court's decision to dismiss the plaintiffs' access-to-courts claim. The plaintiffs there 28 alleged that the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department and the Nevada Highway Patrol

1 conspired to cover up the negligent killing of their decedent, Erin Delew, by Janet Wagner, who 2 was married to a police officer in the LVMPD. The Ninth Circuit held:

3 The Delews have indeed alleged a constitutional violation, 4 namely, that the defendants violated the Delews' right of 5 meaningful access to the courts by covering up the true 6 facts surrounding Erin Rae Delew's death. The Supreme 7 Court held long ago that the right of access to the courts is 8 a fundamental right protected by the Constitution. More 9 recently, the Sixth Circuit held that the Constitution 10 guarantees plaintiffs the right of meaningful access to the 11 courts, the denial of which is established where a party 12 engages in pre-filing actions which effectively covers-up 13 evidence and actually renders any state court remedies 14 ineffective. Applying the Sixth Circuit's reasoning . . . to 15 the Delews' case, we believe the Delews' complaint alleges 16 a cognizable claim under section. To prevail on their 17 claim, the Delews must demonstrate that the defendants' 18 cover-up violated their right of access to the courts by 19 rendering any available state court remedy ineffective. . . .
20 The district court additionally erred by holding that the 21 Delews' conspiracy cover-up claim failed to state a claim 22 for relief. In support of their conspiracy claim, the Delews 23 allege that Janet Kathleen Wagner left the accident scene
24 during the investigation and that the LVMPD and NHP 25 officers permitted Wagner to do so. Construing these facts 26 in a light most favorable to the Delews, it is reasonable to 27 infer an understanding between Wagner and the officers to 28 cover-up the true facts of Erin Rae Delew's death and thereby deprive the Delews of their right of access to the courts.

17 The complaint does not allege facts that could sustain a Section 1983 claim based on a denial of 18 meaningful access to the court system. Among other things, the complaint does not describe 19 what underlying action was frustrated by the city or county and it does not specifically comport 20 with the remaining requirements discussed above to properly plead a denial-of-access claim. If 21 this is to be re-pled, it must be done with adequate specificity as to all elements of a Delew 22 claim.

23 CONCLUSION

24 For the reasons stated above, all claims against defendants County of Lake and City of 25 Clearlake are DISMISSED. Plaintiffs may move within fourteen calendar days for leave to 26 amend. Any such motion should be accompanied by a proposed pleading and the motion 27 should explain why the foregoing problems are overcome by the proposed pleading. Plaintiffs 28

1 must plead their best case. Failing such a motion, judgment will be entered for the city and 2 county.
